Leroy Aitcheson is the school social worker and has supported children for many years.

He is in school every Wednesday.

He helps children and their families who may be having worries at home or school and may need someone to talk to who understands.
Examples of some of the things He can see children about include:

- someone you care about is ill or has died
- you are not getting on with your friends
- problems with your family
- feeling sad and upset
- worried about someone or something

Sometimes you might write, draw or do other activities to help you talk about difficult things.

If you want to talk to Leroy you can see your teacher or any adult in school and they will arrange this for you.

You can also talk to mum, dad or a carer who can arrange this too.
